

JOHNSTOWN READY TO MOVE AS FLOOD MENACES AREA

Stony Creek River Reaches 11.6 Early Today and Merchants Take Warning

IN THE CENTRAL AREA

Portsmouth Reports That All Driven Out of Homes Are Cared For

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., Jan. 22—(INS)—The Stony Creek River in Johnstown, one of the largest tributaries to its great floods in the past, reached a stage of 11.6 feet early today, as merchants in the central city section prepared to move their stock to higher levels.

PORTSMOUTH, O., Jan. 22—(INS)—“The situation is well in hand. Everyone forced to leave home because of the flood is under a roof and will be kept until they can return.”

This was the word broadcast today from this flood-stricken city of 43,000 at the confluence of the Ohio and Scioto Rivers.

Overnight it became the focal point in the far-flung flood picture when at last there was no alternative but to open the valves and permit the murky waters of the rampant Ohio River to take over the city.

Protected against a 62-foot river stage by its million dollar flood wall, the city finally was compelled at 3 a. m. to let the water seep up into the town through sewers lest its terrific force crumble the wall, spreading death as well as destruction.

Four hours after the valves were opened three to four feet of water swirled over portions of the downtown district. The level was expected to rise more than twice that high.

But though beaten back temporarily in its Spartan fight against odds that ultimately proved overwhelming, the city heroically marshalled all agencies to minimize suffering and prevent loss of life.

At 7 a. m. C. M. Strickland, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, assured International News Service the situation was “well in hand” and that all persons in the area to be inundated had been removed safely before opening the flood valves.

“There won’t be huge damage to stores because merchants had plenty of warning and were able to move much of their stock before the flood gates were opened,” said Strickland.

“In some places the business section is under four feet of water (at 7 a. m.) and it is spreading out rapidly over a large territory. It is still raining, which doesn’t help any, and the water

Andalusia Students To Be Served Hot Portions

ANDALUSIA, Jan. 22—Each day for the rest of the winter months students at the Andalusia public school will have a hot portion of food served along with their lunches. This action was taken at a meeting this week of the Andalusia P. T. A. when a committee was appointed to arrange for the lunches.

E. Mae Early, heads the committee and will be assisted by Mrs. Albert Vickers, Mrs. William Lange, Mrs. Franklin C. Spitzer, and Mrs. R. Edelman. It is expected that the committee will have the program in full swing next week.

To eliminate expense for the program members of the association have volunteered to serve the hot dishes on different days of the week. A flat charge of 3 cents per dish will be made to the students to defray the cost of the food.

Mr. Daniel Charles, a teacher at the Andalusia school, showed films to the more than 50 members present at the meeting of his recent trip to the Texas Centennial celebration.

Items of business at the recent meeting held in the new school building here included arrangements for the birthday party celebrating the organization of the Andalusia P. T. A. This will be held February 15. A special program will be prepared for this meeting. Decision was also made to subscribe to a nature magazine for the benefit of the students in the upper grades at the school here.

SELLING HARDWARE STOCK

The remainder of the stock of the William P. Wright Estate is being offered for sale at the Wright store for one week, beginning today. The sale got under way this morning at eight o’clock and will continue for a week at the well-known place of business, 119 Mill street. The assortment, still large, offers a wide selection.

CARDS ON SATURDAY

The card party arranged for tomorrow evening in the K. of C. home promises to be a big success. Mrs. Eli Barnfield, chairman, promises fine prizes, among them a bench hamper, oval card table, table lamp, basket of potatoes, bushel of apples, hosiery, etc. Pinocchio and “500” will be played, starting promptly at 8.45 o’clock.

Harold C. Harvey Dies At Morrisville; Age 48

MORRISVILLE, Jan. 22—Harold C. Harvey, president of the Agasote Mill-board Company, died last night at his home, 853 Crown street, after an eight months’ illness. He was 48 years old and a native of London, England.

Mr. Harvey was an ex-president of the Trenton Country Club and a director of the Wilbur Building & Loan Association and of the Seaside Yacht Club. He was a member of Trenton Lodge No. 5, F. & A. M., Scottish Rite and Crescent Temple.

Surviving in addition to his mother, Mrs. Alexander Harvey, of London, are his wife, Mrs. Sally Rice Harvey; two daughters, Doris Neilson Cockburn Harvey and Edith N. C. Harvey; a son, Alexander N. C. Harvey; a sister, Mrs. Horace Powys-Keck, of London, and two brothers, Reginald and Gerald, both of St. John’s, Newfoundland.

Services will be private Monday afternoon at 2 o’clock. The Rev. Frederick B. Halsey, of Trinity Episcopal Cathedral, will officiate. Burial will be in Ewing Church Cemetery.

PUPILS TO TAKE PART IN A MOCK CONFERENCE

Bristol To Be Among the 64 Schools Represented In Philadelphia

STARTS THIS EVENING

By Jean Roberts
(B. H. S. Press Representative)

A mock Pan-American Conference will be sponsored by the Civic Forum League at Temple University, Philadelphia, tonight and tomorrow. The six general subjects to be taken into consideration are: organization of peace; neutrality; limitation of armaments; judicial problems; economic problems; and intellectual co-operation.

Bristol high school will be among the 64 schools participating in the conference. The home school is representing Nicaragua, and will send four representatives, namely: Mary Brambley, Jean Roberts, Peter Peters and Chester Bair.

The first meeting this evening will be chiefly for the chairman of delegations to get organized. The second is Saturday when a general meeting will be held. The delegates-at-large may speak from the floor for one hour. There will be several reports and addresses and the meeting will be conducted in the usual manner. The third session will be held at one p. m., January 23. This is the last session of the conference.

Following the conference there will be an entertaining program featuring Elwood Dougherty as the solo dancer. Mr. Dougherty is a pupil of Ruth St. Denis and Ted Shawn, and he danced with the Denishawn company during the 1928-29 season.

The Mastbaum Vocational School Orchestra is a unit of the music department. The orchestra is highly rated among the various music circles and has supplied music for very outstanding organizations such as the Music Educators’ National Conference, Philadelphia Teachers’ Association dinners, Rotary Club, etc.

There will be a dance done in Spanish costume to the music of “La Paloma” and “La Cucaracha.”

The Jarabe Tapatio is the national Mexican dance. The girls who will

Civic Club Has Guests At Covered Dish Luncheon

YARDLEY, Jan. 22—Guest day was observed by Yardley Civic Club at the January social meeting yesterday in the club rooms, by a covered dish luncheon served at one o’clock.

A short program was enjoyed, which included piano solos by Mildred E. Dilliplane, “The Harebell” and “The Surprise Symphony,” and Marguerite Marion, who played “The Harp” and “Echoes of the Canyon.”

Mrs. Alfred A. Danser, president of the Bucks County Federation of Pennsylvania Women, who was guest speaker on a radio program from Philadelphia Thursday morning, presented her talk before the club and their guests. Mrs. Danser’s subject was “A Woman’s Club in a Rural Community.” She gave a brief history of the work being done by the 15 clubs in Bucks County, which range in age from three years to 40 years of existence.

Mrs. Robert Barbour then presented an original paper on “The History of Pennsylvania,” and Mrs. Jesse Bilbee closed the program by a reading “I Couldn’t Help Laughing.”

ENGAGED

Mr. and Mrs. Glyndon Priestman, Chestnut Hill, announce the engagement of Mr. Priestman’s daughter, Miss Ruth Priestman, to Anthony Burton, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Russell Burton, 502 Radcliffe street. Miss Priestman is a graduate of the University of California, and attended Columbia University in 1936. Mr. Burton is a graduate of Columbia University. The marriage will take place in the summer.

PROPERTY OWNERS DON'T PAY FOR IMPROVEMENTS

Doylestown Council Still Has About $2067.40 Owing For Curb and Gutter Work

OTHER BORO' AFFAIRS

DOYLESTOWN, Jan. 22—Thirty-four individuals have not paid their share of the cost of the curb and gutter improvement done to their properties in co-operation with the WPA. It was reported at a session of borough council. The total amount still owing the borough is given as $2067.40.

Borough council states the work has done much to enhance the properties but council went on record as not looking kindly on any more, unless there is a speeding up of the payments by the property owners.

These property owners have been sent bills by Council for the cost of the materials. The property owners agreed to pay within 30 days. If the payments are not made, Council will see to it that the cost is entered as a lien against the properties.

As usual the individuals who clamored loudest and hardest for WPA project work on their property have been the most delinquent in making the payment, it was said.

WOULD SEGREGATE ALL WATER DEPT FUNDS

Representative Stockham Introduces Bill to Make Plants Self-Sustaining

DEDICATE ALL MONEYS

Representative Thomas B. Stockham, of Morrisville, member of the Legislature from Bucks county, has introduced a bill segregating and dedicating all moneys derived from borough owned waterworks.

The measure, which is intended to be an amendment to the borough code, provides that “where any water works has been erected or purchased by a borough, the water rental or charges derived from the users of water shall be paid into a special fund. This fund shall be held separate and apart from the general funds of the borough and the moneys in such special fund, from time to time, shall be used only for the payment of costs and expenses of operating, maintaining and repairing such water-works, for the creation of reserves for depreciation, for the payment of interest and sinking fund charges on bonds issued by the borough.”

Gets Suspended Sentence For Alleged Shortage

(By International News Service)
PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 22—A suspended sentence of six months and probation for one year on condition that he refund $543.92 of postal money he used for his general store business, was imposed on Albert B. Smith, 30, former postmaster at Pineville, Bucks County, by Federal Judge Albert B. Maris, today.

Smith pleaded guilty to the shortage in his postal accounts today and explained that he did not intend to embezzle, but only use the money because he was short of ready cash.

Assistant United States Attorney Thomas J. Curtin informed the Judge that a cashier’s check for the full amount has already been forwarded to the postal authorities, and is now in the mails.

Smith, who was appointed postmaster April 3, 1935, made a statement saying the stock of merchandise in his store is worth around $8,000, and he owns two properties worth $14,000. The discrepancy was discovered by post-office inspectors, October 23 last, when they made a periodic examination of Smith’s accounts.

GIRARD TELLS OF LAFAYETTE'S VISIT TO BRISTOL

In the Philadelphia Inquirer yesterday Girard in his column “Girard’s Talks of the Day,” writes in an interesting manner of Dr. B. F. Fackenthal, dean of Pennsylvania historians and a resident of Riegelsville, who has traced the steps of General Lafayette from Brandywine to Bethlehem, passing through Bristol.

Girard writes: Wounded at the first battle in which he fought for American independence, the twenty-year-old French nobleman had a weary journey from the Brandywine to the banks of the Lehigh.

Yes, Lafayette was only five days removed from his twentieth birthday when a British bullet passed clear through his left leg below the knee. Washington’s army that day retreated 14 miles back to Chester and Lafayette was carried in a wagon.

Next day he was fetched to Philadelphia in a boat on the Delaware.

From Philadelphia to Bristol, Lafayette again traveled by boat. Then he had a piece of good luck. At Bristol, the youthful Major General met Congressman Laurens, of South Carolina. That Southern blueblood had a carriage and he personally conveyed Lafayette to Bethlehem.

Several French officers rode beside the carriage. In the ancient diary kept by the Moravian congregation at Bethlehem it is recorded that Lafayette arrived there 10 days after he had been wounded at Brandywine.

Two Quadruplets Die

Montreal, Jan. 22—Modern medical science today failed to save the lives of two of the quadruplets born yesterday to Mr. and Mrs. Armande Roudeau. A boy and girl died shortly after attending physicians had given all a “fair chance” to survive.

Pope Reported Slowly Dying

Vatican City, Jan. 22—Slowly dying and in great torment, Pope Pius, nevertheless, found strength today to commiserate ten others.

He held from his sick chamber, mass for the repose of the soul of his predecessor, Pope Benedict XIV, who died 15 years ago today.

Then Cardinal Pacelli, the Papal Secretary of State, informed the suffering Pontiff of the death of his friend, Monsignor Cappello, Nicaraguan legate. The Pope immediately ordered messages of condolence sent to the Monsignor’s family.

After suffering a night of agony, the Pope, after mass, finally dropped off to sleep at 7 a. m., with the aid of strong sedatives administered by Dr. Amanti Milani. The Holy Father’s condition, it was stated semi-officially, is “slowly worse.” He was able to sleep only two hours.

Dr. Milani prevailed upon him, despite the Pope’s insistence, to remain in bed again today. The doctor, constantly in attendance, felt the strain of his removal to his new chair would further disturb the blood circulation in the Pope’s paralyzed leg.

AT COUNCIL SESSION

The following members of American Legion Auxiliary, Robert W. Bracken Post, attended the meeting of the Bi-County Council of Auxiliaries, held in Willow Grove yesterday: Mrs. Elizabeth Delker, Mrs. Robert Clark, Sr., Mrs. Arthur Zug, Mrs. Harold H. Dettmer, Mrs. Dorothy Fechtenburg, Mrs. Benjamin Ahart, Mrs. Robert Downing, Mrs. Harry Wessaw. Bristol Auxiliary received a gift from the Eastern District, Mrs. Steelman, this group being one of the 10 in the Council securing a national citation for membership. Presentation was made to Mrs. Downing, membership chairman.

CORNWELLS P. T. A. BEGINS COURSE OF EIGHT LESSONS

First Meeting of the Study Group To Be Held January 28th

INTERESTING PROGRAM

The first lesson in the parent education study course for this season was presented at the meeting of Cornwells Parent-Teacher Association last evening by Samuel K. Faust, leader. The topic: “What the Modern Family Can Contribute to a Community,” is one of a series of eight. The meeting was held in the Bensalem Township high school.

The first meeting of the study group will be held Thursday, January 28, at four o’clock in the high school, the subject for study and discussion to be “Children and Community Responsibility.” Mrs. Francis Rosbauer, Bucks county chairman of parent education, spoke briefly on parent education.

The meeting was presided over by Mrs. Roscoe Perkins, president, and was opened with group singing led by E. J. Frick, music director.

Mrs. Joseph Smith announced the membership drive would end at the February meeting insofar as the prize offered was concerned. The enrollment is now 383.

Mrs. Perkins and Mrs. White gave accounts of the meeting in Richboro recently and Mr. Frick announced a motion picture, “Flying the Lindbergh Trail,” would be shown March 5, proceeds to go towards the purchase of an amplifying system.

C. V. Wenner announced there would be a supper given in honor of the football squad on February 24th, with Mrs. Dettmer in charge. Any money over and above expenses will be given to the senior class.

Miss Cecilia Snyder’s home room was awarded the attendance banner.

Program included tap dancing, Frances Stuhltrager, Ann Swallow; piano duet, “Moon Racket,” Mabel Ridge, Virginia McKenzie; quartet, “Get Away from Dis Confel,” Bruce McKenzie, Kimbel Faust, Walter Fortnum, Robert Lang; octette, “Rocking Time,” eight girls.

A social hour with refreshments concluded the meeting.

523 NEW CARDS ISSUED AT LIBRARY HERE LAST YEAR

Total Circulation of Books, However, Shows Slight Decrease From 1935

CIRCULATION IS 27,000

Three-Quarters of the Books Taken Out Were by Adults, The Report Shows

Five hundred and twenty-three new membership cards were issued at the Bristol Free Library last year and 785 readers made use of the reading rooms, according to the annual report of Clifford L. Anderson, president of the institution.

At the annual meeting of the shareholders last night Mr. Anderson submitted his annual report and there was the election of officers.

Mr. Anderson’s report follows:

January 20th, 1937
To the Contributors of
The Bristol Free Library,
Bristol, Pa.

Your President reports, for the Officers and Board of Managers of your Library for the year 1936, which is the 21st year of its existence, the following:

The total circulation of books was 27,000, a slight decrease over 1935 but again, undoubtedly due to the ruling permitting only one book to be taken out on one card.

523 new membership cards were taken out during 1936 and 785 readers made use of the Library reading room, nearly twice the number for the year 1935.

Three quarters of the books taken out were by adults and one quarter by juvenile readers. There is a most apparent demand for scientific reference, and the best of the old and modern literature, the greater part for the students of our High School and industrial plants, and which demand we should by all means endeavor to meet.

Your Book Committee added 650 books to the Library during 1936, of which 529 were purchased and 139 gifts to the Library. Also some valuable reference books have been added to the Library, which are such appreciated.

Rotarians and Elks present us with their magazines.

The three workers of the book binding department have maintained their out-put by rebinding 700 books, putting them in excellent condition for the hard usage your library books receive, besides making them available for continued call and use.

Bristol Exchange Club To Be Hosts to H. S. XI

Following a precedent which was established last year and which met with wholehearted, widespread approval, the Exchange Club of Bristol will be hosts to the victorious Bristol High School football squads and their coaches and managers at a banquet to be held in the high school cafeteria on Thursday, January 28th, at seven o’clock.

Under the direction and leadership of committee chairman Keith M. Rosser and his associates, William H. H. Fine, David L. Hertzler, and Franklin Wallin, elaborate plans have been made to make this occasion one of the outstanding events of the community’s year of activities, and a fitting conclusion to one of Bristol high’s most brilliant football seasons.

Included among the speakers of the evening will be Coach Howard Colehower, mentor of the freshmen football squads at the University of Pennsylvania, and himself at one time a star player on the Red and Blue team. He will bring with him the famous William “Reds” Pollock, formerly captain and outstanding player on the Philadelphia Northeast High School and the Pennsylvania Military College teams, and now a brilliant performer on the Chicago Bears.

Coach Colehower will also show films of a Penn football game of the past season in its entirety, elaborating upon the various plays with interesting, entertaining comment as the film moves on.

Because of the character of the occasion, the number of tickets available to the public is limited. To the extent that such tickets are available, a cordial invitation is extended to those who are not members of the Exchange Club but desire to attend. To obtain tickets they should communicate at once with a member of the Club or with a member of the Committee on Arrangements named above.

Films showing the manufacture of the Buick automobile, shown by Clarence Winter, were enjoyed by members of the club.

NEW BATTLESHIPS

Whether or not one is a "big navy" man, there should be interest for all in the information now released concerning the two $50,000,000 battleships which have just been authorized as the latest additions to the United States navy.

Specifications made public by Claude A. Swanson, secretary of the navy, called for speed of 26 or 27 knots as compared with the 30 knots which the newer ships of other navies are designed to attain. But the new American ships will be at least five knots faster than any battleship now flying the American flag.

What the new ships will lack in speed will be more than compensated for, navy officials believe, in greater weight of armor and bigger guns than obtained in other navies. The size of the guns has not been definitely decided, the specifications as they stand permitting an option of fourteen-inch or sixteen-inch guns.

Whichever gun size is finally approved, the new ships will be unlike most battleships afloat in that they will have only three turrets. If the sixteen-inch size is selected, each turret will carry three guns; if the fourteen-inch is decided upon, each turret will carry four guns.

Quadruple turrets are not an innovation in American battleship design, navy officials said. The navy has mounted four guns in one turret before, but none of the same caliber. Among the ships of other navies, the navy designers could find only two with quadruple turrets, the Dunkerque and the Strassbourg of the French navy.

In tonnage the ships will not exceed the 35,000 limit set in the Washington treaty, although that treaty has expired, but even so, they will have a greater displacement than other American battleships.

TIME OUT FOR BIG BEN

They tell a story about an English village postmaster visiting London who took out his own watch and asserted that Big Ben was two minutes fast. If that postmaster was re-visiting London the other day, he had a chance to laugh right back at the London folk. For Big Ben did worse than go a couple of minutes astray. Big Ben stopped.

Passersby hardly could believe their eyes, the morning it happened. They knew it must be after 9 o'clock, but Big Ben said quarter to 9. Big Ben stuck to his story of it being only 8:45 until about 9:30. Then the foreman of a gang of painters, at work in the clock tower, stepped outside to ascertain the time. He looked up at Big Ben. He stared, his mouth opened; then he dashed back into the clock tower and started up to find out what was wrong. Before he reached the top of the tower, Big Ben started again, apparently of its own motion.

The painters couldn't figure it out, but the clockmakers could. Here, they said, is how it happened: The painters had placed a ladder against the spindle which turns Big Ben's hands. The ladder did not stop the clock, but the weight of a man who climbed up it did. And when he came down again lack of his weight apparently started the clock once more.

Probably the clockmakers were right. At all events, some London clerks had a good alibi for being late that morning.

RECIPES

Chicken With Apples
Even the accomplished chef of a certain famous dining place in New York City is devoting his talents to devising new apple dishes. This particular inspiration he terms "Le Poussin en Cocotte a la Normandise," which isn't too formidable for the clever cook to adopt.

Wedges of apples are put into the casserole, with chicken breasts, seasonings and any gravy available. Although the chef specifies white meat, solid portions from other sections of the fowl can be included. Cover and bake slowly, adding a few mushrooms when the dish is partly done, if desired.

More quartered apples are baked separately and served with the chicken and vegetables, buttered green peas being preferred. Incidentally, this food genius cooks new peas without and water. He starts them with butter and a bit of onion, covers the dish and lets the peas cook in the oven, in their own flavory juice.

Scotch Marmalade
Although an apple in the corner of the lunchbox is almost traditional, a fresh idea is to snap up meat sandwiches with apple ginger marmalade. This delicious marmalade has many other uses. Spread on thin sandwiches, it is delicious for tea, or for luncheon, served with a salad. This recipe is easy, economical and will prove a welcome friend on the pantry shelf.

Four pounds sugar, one pint water, one ounce finely-shaved ginger root, four pounds MacIntosh apples, finely chopped, four lemons, grated yellow rind and juice. (Reduce quantity of lemons for a less tart jam.)

Make a syrup of sugar and water, boiling them together three minutes. Add remaining ingredients. Cook until thick and clear. Seal in pint jars, or in regular jelly glasses, topped with paraffin.

Holiday Cake
A dependable white cake recipe is always in demand for daily or extra-special occasions. This particular cake may be swathed in thick layers of luscious icing, or put together with chopped fruits and nuts. It is equally good baked in two deep layer tins, or in a deep round mould.

Three-fourths cup shortening, one and one-half cups granulated sugar, two and one-half cups flour, two and one-half teaspoons baking powder, one-fourth teaspoon salt, one cup milk, one teaspoon vanilla, four egg whites.

Cream the shortening until it is soft and light. Add sugar gradually, beating well until the mixture is well-creamed and fluffy. Add vanilla at this point to coat the flavoring.

Sift the flour once, measure, add the baking powder and salt and sift again. Add the dry ingredients alternately with the milk, beginning and ending with the dry ingredients. Beat after each addition, lastly folding in the stiffly beaten egg whites. Bake in a moderate oven twenty to thirty minutes. (355 degrees F.)

Sweet Potato Novelty

Use sweet potatoes while they are in season. Don't try to hoard them, for they soften or lose flavor quickly. True, they bake slowly, but boil them until they are partly tender, and then finish the cooking in the oven.

Try this delicious casserole novelty: Two cups boiled sweet potatoes, cut in one-fourth inch slices; one-half cup brown sugar, one and one-half cups thinly sliced tart apples, four teaspoons shortening, one teaspoon salt.

Put half the potatoes in buttered baking dish. Cover with half the apples, sprinkle with half the sugar, dot with part of the shortening or butter, and sprinkle with half the salt. Repeat. Use buttered crumbs on top, if desired. Bake one hour in moderate oven 350 degrees F. This is a substantial, nourishing dish for a bitter January night.

Date-Nut Pudding

I can vouch for this delicious, quickly assembled pudding, which is cooked in the top of the double boiler.

One package dates, seeded and cut up; one-third cup granulated sugar, one-half cup cracker crumbs (bread crumbs can be used); one cup hot water, pinch of salt, one egg, one-half cup chopped walnut meats.

Place all in top of double boiler, over hot water, except egg and nuts. Cook five to ten minutes, then add beaten egg and nuts. Serve cold with whipped cream, or this sauce: Cream one-eighth cup butter and one-half cup powdered sugar. Add well-beaten yolk of one egg. Cook in double boiler until thick, stirring constantly. Flavor and fold in beaten egg white. Chill both sauce and pudding.

Plans Progress For The President's Ball Here

Much progress is being made in the plans for the Birthday Ball for President Roosevelt, which will be held in St. Mark's Hall, Friday evening, January 29th.

The committee in charge has been fortunate in securing Ray Londahl's ten piece broadcasting orchestra for the affair. This band had a previous engagement for the 29th, but cancelled it in order to play at the local ball.

"An appeal is made," by the committee, "to the people of Bristol to support this worthy affair, which is one of a series of over 5,000 similar affairs which will be held throughout the nation for the purpose of raising funds to combat infantile paralysis."

"Thirty percent of the profits from the local ball will be sent to the national committee for delivery to the president to endow Warm Springs Foundation. Seventy percent will remain in this area to replenish the birthday ball fund which was established three years ago for the purpose of aiding those children in this community who are afflicted with this dread disease and are unable to help themselves.

"Since that time, the trustees of this fund, Miss Clara Johnson, state nurse, and Joseph P. Duffy, postmaster, report that they have provided transportation for many local paralysis victims to Philadelphia for orthopedic treatment, and on one occasion sent two children as far as Reading, for special treatment. Along with the above, braces and orthopedic shoes have been purchased for destitute children who are past 16 years of age, and thus not entitled to state aid."

A record of the expenditures of this fund has been kept by Mr. Duffy at the post office and may be examined by anyone sufficiently interested.

CHAPTER XV

To live and move amidst beauty! To have such a wonderful setting! These thoughts came to her as she walked with Mrs. Vandaveer into the Louis XVth drawing room with its genuine antiques.

The butler had already set out the tea-things and the priceless old French silver on a spindle-legged table that was close to a log fire, for the Spring day had turned chilly.

The owner of the house was there. Mrs. Vandaveer presented Luana to her husband.

She thought: "What a distinguished-looking man! But he looks terribly tired!" She thought of the Colonel. The face was deeply lined and seemed to sag, just as her stepfather's had sagged that terrible day in the prison at San Diego.

Mr. Vandaveer, however, was much handsomer than her stepfather.

Luana sat on an uncomfortable chair that she was perfectly sure had cost at least a thousand dollars. She thought of Yvonne's funny little French livingroom. What a contrast this was!

Yvonne would love to hear about this house, this room. Yvonne was simply avid for gossip.

Ramon arrived. He kissed the hand of his hostess, bowed elegantly from the waistline to Mr. Vandaveer, gave a less unctuous bow to Luana.

"Horrid little beast!" she thought. So obviously out for what he could get! So evidently a gigolo! Lorraine Vandaveer seemed nervous. Truth to tell, there was a fair chance of an extremely attractive man being at the opening of the new bridge club this afternoon, since he had a half share in it, she understood. She wanted to cultivate this man and gradually ease Ramon out of the picture. Since he was much sought after, it was quite in the cards that he might not remain long at the opening. It was almost five-thirty now. They were already a half-hour late. Would Joel be annoyed were she to depart with Ramon, leaving Luana Waters to pour tea for him?

Joel was being pleasant to the girl. Better strike now.

"Darling, it's too tiresome, but I'm ages late for a boring committee meeting for charity! You know—in connection with the big Carnival in Madison Square Garden six weeks hence. I've absolutely got to attend, as a matter of fact. And Ramon, you're due too—" she turned from him to her husband and Luana to explain—"Ramon has undertaken a prominent part in the pageant—Benvenuto Cellini, isn't it, Ramon? Miss Waters, would you mind officiating at the tea-table in my absence? Joel, you understand I simply must show up!"

Luana was taken aback. She glanced shyly at Lorraine's husband.

His face remained a smiling mask. "Most certainly keep your appointment, my dear Lorraine."

Luana thought whimsically: "Charity in this town sometimes must cover a queer lot of on-going!"

"Take good care of Joel," Mrs. Vandaveer beamed.

Joel gave an odd little crooked smile. "You leave me in good and certainly in beautiful hands," he conceded.

Luana wondered what that smile of his portended. She did not know that Joel Vandaveer was well aware that his handsome wife was fibbing to him as she had steadily fibbed for a long time, and that he was no longer wounded or annoyed, as he had once been over her lack of character. He was thinking that Lorraine was getting careless. Had she not told him a couple of days ago that she absolutely must go to this opening? He had told her in reply that he didn't think much of those connected with the club and that, as she seemed so keen on Society, and keeping up her position in it, why mix herself with inferior people?

True, in a way, he was fond of Lorraine. He was proud of her beauty and her chic, but long since he had realized her inferior mental equipment and the frivolousness of her character. She never had made any effort to understand him or be a companion to him. They had really very little in common.

He was a fine man, a loyal man, and no woman-chaser. He thought Luana a beautiful young girl, but any idea of flitting with her never occurred to him for a minute. As a matter of fact, the thought had flashed through his mind that it would be very pleasant to have a daughter who looked like her and had the same sweet, shy manner.

She seemed no more than seventeen. Lorraine and he had been married eighteen years. Lorraine had never wanted a child, for fear it might spoil her figure. Had she held different views, it was possible they might have had a daughter just this age. . . .

Lorraine was speaking to the girl now, inviting her to a cocktail party she was giving in the penthouse the following evening.

"Do drop in, Miss Waters, any time between five and seven o'clock. And bring an escort, if you like."

Luana thanked her, but did not commit herself to say yes or no.

She thought it rather strange that Mrs. Vandaveer should invite her. But if she didn't turn up, and Mr. Quackenbush heard of it, would he be angry with her?

Mr. Quackenbush did hear of it, only an hour later, at the new

There was a mirror in the elevator. Luana took a quick survey of herself.

The Eugenie hat framed a face, that glowed pinkly in this light, of delicate feature and exquisite contour.

The blue of her eyes was deepened by the color of her hat and now, awakened, yet stirring so gently in her heart that almost she was unaware of it as yet—for the young man at her side. He smiled frankly at her in the mirror.

But he paid no compliment. That was not his way. She had been glad of it at first, but now she wished he would whisper to her that she looked lovely.

Not from any vain thought in her heart, but from a woman's wish to please where she is attracted. Anyone seeing them together bridge-and-cocktail club to which he had contrived to get himself elected to a membership.

He found himself at the bar beside the lovely Mrs. Vandaveer who carelessly told him she had invited Luana. "Because lots of the women who voted for her in your competition will be there. Also I feel she's sort of a protégée of mine. Let her off at five, Mr. Quackenbush, because she's certainly a good advertisement for you."

He conceded this. So convinced was he that Luana was an "ad" that he insisted she wear—for the occasion only, be it understood—a $350 "cocktail gown" of sapphire blue velvet that moulded Luana's lithe body as if she had been poured into it. It had a silver metallic collar, and long tight sleeves, and the tiniest of trains. He was attempting to revive the Eugenie hat. His milliner had created one out of the same blue velvet as the gown, with a feather curling under the chin in a lighter shade of blue. Luana wore this to the party.

Jimmy Randolph called for her at the shop on Fifth Avenue at five. Bearing in mind Mrs. Vandaveer's suggestion about an escort, Luana had asked Jimmy to escort her.

"It isn't much in my line—cocktail-partying, I mean—but if you want me I'll go," he told her accommodatingly.

He was not to know the complications that his presence at the party would eventually bring into the lives of at least four people. Luana and he set off blithely together.

Secure in the knowledge that an attractive young man was accompanying her, and that in her sapphire velvet gown she would be at least as well-dressed as the average woman at the party, Luana got out of the taxicab on upper Park Avenue, and Jimmy paid the driver.

They entered the building where the Vandaveers lived, and shot up in the elevator to the penthouse.

would have said they made a handsome pair, these two. Young Randolph, tall and slim in his suit of well-cut navy serge, his bronze hair brushed back from his fine forehead.

When they had dined and danced in modest places within his means, it had been borne in on Luana that girls and women often looked at him admiringly, and at her half enviously.

She asked herself now: "Will the smart crowd here realize how awfully good-looking he is?" She felt proud of Jimmy.

Strains of Hawaiian music greeted their ears as the butler opened the door to them. A stringed orchestra was playing in a conservatory which opened on a music room that had been cleared for dancing. Its parquet floor had been polished, and already a goodly number of couples were dancing.

There was tea in the beautiful French drawingroom, but when they arrived, that room was practically empty.

People had flocked to the bar of the Vandaveer home, which was a room in itself, done in Old English style, with a high counter that ran almost the whole length of one side, and a brass foot-rail to it.

Tables with red checkered cloths were scattered here and there, and already each one was taken.

There was the continual popping of corks as fresh bottles of champagne were opened. The clatter of ice in metal containers, violently shaken in the process of mixing the cocktails. The babel of tongues, too, mingling with the music of the ukulele and the steel guitar.

Joel Vandaveer had come uptown earlier that his work, at his wife's request. She thought it would look well to have her husband present at the gathering from its beginning, in view of the fact that there had been gossip lately about herself and Ramon.

Your Library Committee has seen to it that the fixtures and general appearance of the Library is maintained in a most satisfactory manner.

The Book Committee has met all calls for current fiction and, as far as means permit, for scientific and research literature.

The Finance Committee again calls upon the public to more generously respond to appeals for funds for the continued growing demands of our readers, more especially the younger readers, who require literature of a scientific and reference character, which are expensive.

Your Library is a fine institution and is guided or governed by citizens, who give of their time and money so that our municipality may have a library where lovers of reading and students who need books of reference and of a scientific nature may find them for the asking.

The Officers and Board of Managers of the Bristol Library ask that those of our citizens who can, contribute to this institution and maintain a library from which adults and minors can procure books of reference of a scientific character, or books of fiction for the idle hours.

Help us make your Library grow bigger and greater, to meet the growing demand that continues from year to year.

dance it will wear the real china poliana costume, which consists of a white cotton blouse, embroidered in red and green, a red skirt trimmed with thousands of sequins, and a green scarf wound about the waist and crossing over the shoulders to be tucked in at the waist in front.

There will also be a Spanish chorus composed of students of Kensington high school.

Altogether, this mock Pan-American Conference promises to be an intensely interesting and entertaining affair.

This program will be broadcast over stations WIP and WING at the following hours on Saturday: 10:45-11:15 a. m.; 11:30 a. m. to 12 noon; 1:00-1:30 p. m.

Would Segregate All Water Dep't Funds

ough to pay such waterworks, and for the construction of extensions and improvements of such waterworks and the payment of interest and sinking fund charges on bonds issued by the borough for such extensions and improvements, and for no other purpose.

"The rentals or charges imposed on the consumers of water by any borough which is operating waterworks," the bill continues, "shall at all time be sufficient to provide the revenues necessary to pay the costs, expenses and charges provided for this section."

Representative Stockham explains that in some boroughs funds obtained from water departments are used to finance the borough generally, in others the general funds are used to pay department deficits. The bill is intended to make each water department stand on its own feet and pay its own way.

is up to the 62.1 stage and rising two-tenths foot per hour.

"But thanks to the State Highway Department, State Police, National Guard and other agencies, we've been fortunate enough to look after every refugee without a semblance of disorder."

"School buildings are being used to house flood victims. Many residents in the hill-top section have been of great assistance, opening their homes to those whose residences are under water."

"Now, if we can keep sickness out, we've got the flood licked."

With the city accessible only by boat, telephone service was being maintained, but the wires were so heavily taxed with long distance calls from relations seeking information about flood sufferers, that two hours frequently elapsed before calls could be completed.

Factory whistles and sirens sounded a warning well in advance of the opening of the flood gates, so that no one would be left behind.

FARM SHOW HIGHLIGHTS

HARRISBURG, Jan. 22 — (INS) — Horses may have entered the class of "Vanishing Americans" but according to reports made at the Horse Breeders Association convention here they can't be classed as "Vanishing Pennsylvanians." More than 25,000 horses were imported by Pennsylvania farmers last year, a livestock specialist told delegates.

Over a half a million rural inhabitants have been lured to Harrisburg by the State Farm Show thus far. State officials consider this one of the most important phases of the show. They point out that if it were held elsewhere many farmers might never glimpse their state capitol.

From a milk standpoint a small, good producing herd of cows is more profitable than a large, poor herd. The assumption, advanced by the Agricultural Extension Service of Penn State College, is that the small herd will make more profit from less milk as the large poor herds are to blame for the surplus milk that appears as a problem on so many markets.

The grand champion Guernsey cow this year turned out to be a Reading product. It is owned by the J. Barlow Cullum Estate. The grand champion bull hails from Stillwater and is owned by Carter Bachs.

Farming is "going soft." Even the rugged old wheelbarrow, so familiar to the Pennsylvania farm will be replaced by a streamlined vehicle with soft rubber tires if exhibits presented at the Farm Show are adopted by the state's "sons of the soil."

While other members of her breed were busy competing for blue ribbons, a Holstein cow owned by J. M. McLaughlin of Leesburg, skipped away with the real honors. She gave birth to triplets. Twin calves are considered a rarity.

Celery honors this year went to Progress—the latter being the name of a community in Dauphin County. The prize bunches were grown by Anthony Bonitz.

That honesty is a virtue which Pennsylvania farmers possess was demonstrated at the Farm Show by a young farmer of 20 years who approached a concession booth run by Mrs. Ellis Stoford for the Methodist Church and handed the surprised woman a dollar. He explained: "I made a purchase last year at a stand operated by the Methodist Church, and after leaving I discovered I was given a dollar too much change."

One exhibit was almost a perfect hog by itself. A booth of swine entries garnered seven ribbons.

Property Owners Don't Pay For Improvements

Because of complaints made to Council, the Police Department was authorized to examine three specific complaints, involving the porch on the Railroad House, the awning over the pavement at the Kolbe Building and a barn on the Cartwright property all of which are alleged to be a menace to safety.

The property owners will be given 15 days in which to make changes to correct the danger themselves or Council will abate the nuisance and place the charges on the property owners.

Councilman Bartram H. Moore, reporting on the dilapidated condition of the porch on the Clinton street side of the Railroad House, stated that a good, heavy snow will break down the porch, throwing it out into the street.

The burning of rubbish, including a bon-fire of cartons, in the centre of the town, was censured by Council as being negligent and a fire hazard. It was pointed out that some times the fire is a definite menace because of the intensity and size of the blaze even though it may be guarded.

"There are too many roofs, especially one tar-covered, in the neighborhood, and one man can't keep a fire under control," said a councilman.

To replace two resignations on the Doylestown Board of Health, Council approved the names of Dr. William H. Fluck and Dr. R. Lippincott Walter.

Dr. Walter will replace District Attorney Arthur M. Eastburn, who resigned because he felt that in his opinion he should not serve while holding the office of District Attorney.

Dr. Fluck fills the vacancy caused by the resignation of Mrs. A. Oscar Martin. Submitting Chief of Police James P. Welsh's report from December 21, 1936, to January 18, 1937, Councilman Bartram H. Moore stated 33 warnings had been issued; ten arrests made; four discharged with reprimand; one discharged for lack of evidence; two sentenced to five days in the County Prison; two pending, and one held for violation of a two-year parole.

Ninety-two persons were sheltered during the month.

Chairman of the finance committee, George F. Smith, submitting the report of the borough treasurer, stated the balance on hand January 1, 1937, was $1416.56. Other facts follow:

Delinquent borough tax, $227. Delinquent water rent, $335.29. Sewer rent, January $847.75. Delinquent sewer rent, $80. Receipts for the month totaled $3169.25. Bills paid amounted to $928.85, leaving a balance R. Smith.

Upon recommendation made by Councilman G. Thawley Heyman, the wages of four employees of the street department were increased to 55 cents an hour for this year.

Councilman George E. Willard, who made the motion, spoke favorably of the work done by four employees, Funk, Parker, Diehl and Hafler, all of whom were described as worthy of the increase. The motion for the increase was seconded by Councilman George

Playboys Try Again

By BURNLEY

They always learn their lessons too late! That's the old story in the primer of life, and athletes afford the best examples.

Two gilt-edged, A No. 1 specimens of this school are a couple of fistiana's famous playboys, Mad Max Baer and Crazy Kid Chocolate.

Of Mad Max, much has been written, especially in his heyday, or should I say "hey-hey-day". Maxwell was a good fellow when he had it, but that was a few years ago. The big bad Baer burned the candle at both ends and wound up taking it on the chin from Braddock and, especially, Louis.

Now the California Daffydill has seen the error of his playboy ways and is set to reform and stage a comeback, which he will inflict on the poor defenseless Brits. This may come under the head of John Bull repaying the war debt. The British deserve some credit on account if they pay to see Maundin Max stage his act.

The dark half of this playboy pair, ebony Keed Chocolate, tossed off a fortune amidst the bright lights of Harlem, and now, penniless and washed up at 24, he also is attempting a serious comeback.

You can't retrace those gay days of the past, however, and both these fistiotomethers of yesterday have reached the end of their pugilistic rope at an early age, due to dissipation and too much happy times. You can't have your cake and eat it—that's the old adage.
